Much and Many

We can use much and many to talk about quantities.

We can also use a lot of or lots of, but we will cover that in another lesson.

To ask about quantities, we use how many for things we can count and how much for things we can't count.

How many cookies are there in the packet?

How much water would you like?

There are many buses in my town.

My grandfather doesn't have much hair.

My father doesn't have many books.

For things we can't count [uncountable nouns], we use much in sentences and questions.

There was too much rain last week.

How much rain did you have last summer?

My teacher gives us too much homework.
