

PLACES IN A CITY

A Place For Entertainment

life	boosts	trees	identity	purpose	variety
	accessible	well-being	picnic	benefits

Public areas are developed for the _____ of all citizens enjoying outdoor spaces. They bring people together, offer a place for entertainment and improve everyone's overall _____. Similar to coffee shops and bars, public areas bring _____ to its communities and may even improve an area's overall security. Along with these _____, public spaces both _____ your physical well-being by encouraging activity, as well as your mental health through the power of nature.

In order for any public area to be popular, it needs to have a _____ of options for its guests to choose from – such as provide _____ under which to read, grass on which to _____, trails on which people can hike or children's attractions where families can relax. All public spaces should be _____ by anyone and are designed to serve the interests of everyone, therefore, in a way, these public areas form part of a city or community's _____.

Follow-up & Discussion Questions

1. Similar to coffee shops and bars, public areas bring _____.
2. Describe a public area near your home.

3. Is there anything about this public area that you don't like?

4. The passage says public spaces both boost your physical well-being, as well as your? _____
5. What do we need in order for any public area to be popular?

6. What would you like to add to the public area near your house?

7. Do you think a stall selling drinks is a good idea?

Teacher's Key

Public areas are developed for the purpose of all citizens enjoying outdoor spaces. They bring people together, offer a place for entertainment, and improve everyone's overall well-being. Similar to coffee shops and bars, public areas bring life to its communities and may even improve an area's overall security. Along with these benefits, public spaces both boost your physical well-being by encouraging activity, as well as your mental health through the power of nature. In order for any public area to be popular, it needs to have a variety of options for its guests to choose from – such as trees under which to read, grass on which to picnic, trails on which people can hike or children's attractions where families can relax. All public spaces should be accessible by anyone and are designed to serve the interests of everyone, therefore, in a way, these public areas form part of a city or community's identity.

Follow-up & Discussion Questions

1. Similar to coffee shops and bars, public areas bring ...?
2. Describe a public area near your home.
3. Is there anything about this public area that you don't like?
4. The passage says public spaces both boost your physical well-being, as well as your?
5. What do we need in order for any public area to be popular?
6. What would you like to add to the public area near your house?
7. Do you think a stall selling drinks is a good idea?