

I FORGOT MY PASSWORD AGAIN

Listening Task – “Password Panic!”

Your teacher will read a passage to you.

Part 1: Listen and Circle the Emotions. Based on what you hear, which emotions do you think the character is feeling?

-  Angry
-  Stressed
-  Sleepy
-  Funny
-  Sad
-  Confident

Part 2: Fill in the Blanks

Li Wei tried two passwords: _____ and _____.

The website sent a code to his _____.

Li Wei felt _____ and _____.

His friend said: “_____.”

Part 3: Discussion

What would you do in Li Wei’s situation? _____

Have you ever had a tech disaster before class? _____

Part 4: The Drama Awards

Choose one of the following categories. Write a 5–6 sentence speech as if you won the award.

Categories:

- Most Dramatic Login Fail
- Best Fake Password
- Most Creative Excuse
- Fastest “Forgot Password” Clicker
- Most Emotional Tech Breakdown

Example Starter: “Thank you for this award. I’d like to thank my broken keyboard, my slow Wi-Fi, and the website that locked me out after three tries...”

Part 5: Mini Skit – “Password Disaster”

In pairs, create a short skit (1–2 minutes) showing a password problem. Use past tense verbs, emotional expressions, and tech vocabulary.

Ideas:

- You’re locked out of your account before a big test.
- You try 10 passwords and get blocked.
- You ask your teacher for help, but they forget their password, too!

Optional Props: Phone, notebook, dramatic sighs, exaggerated typing

Audio Script (for teacher read-aloud or recording)

Narrator: It's 8:00 AM. Li Wei is late for school. He grabs his laptop and tries to log in.

Li Wei: Okay... password time. Is it "LiWei2024!" or "DragonBoy88"?

Narrator: He tries both. Nothing works.

Li Wei: Nooo! I changed it last night!

Narrator: He clicks "Forgot Password." The website sends a code... to his old email.

Li Wei: I deleted that email last month!

Narrator: Li Wei feels stressed, angry, and slightly dramatic. He calls his friend.

Friend: Try turning it off and on again.

Li Wei: That's your advice?

Narrator: Will Li Wei get into his account before class starts? Stay tuned...
