Dear Mia,

First — big virtual hug 🤗. Feeling like “everyone except me” is super common at your age.

Social media makes it look like everyone is living in a romantic movie, but that's mostly filtered perfection.

The truth (with a smile):

- Many of those “perfect couples” argue about small things like what to watch on Netflix.
- Being single at 16 is completely normal — it's actually the best time to focus on yourself.

My advice:

- Enjoy being single! Do things that make you happy (hobbies, sports, friends).
- Don't rush into a relationship just because others have one.
- Be open and friendly — the right person will come when the time is right.
- Remember: it's better to be single than in a bad relationship.

You are enough exactly as you are. The best love story starts with liking yourself first.
